Sabancı University's graduate program in Ottoman and Modern Turkish History aims to foster fresh, unbiased, and critical visions of the Ottoman-Turkish past that are informed by the latest research. The program's separate MA and PhD tracks offer a holistic and integrated course of study that provides students from outside the field the chance to familiarize themselves with the discipline of history and recent scholarship and debates in Ottoman and Turkish Studies. The diverse specializations of our academic staff and the interdisciplinary makeup of the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences mean that students can pursue a course of study tailored to their own interests and goals even as they develop a firm and comprehensive grounding in the field.

WORK CLOSELY WITH TOP SCHOLARS

Since Sabancı University's History Program is graduate-only, our professors can dedicate their time to working with you, whether that's in the context of one of our ongoing research projects, academic advising, or your own research and coursework. Further, multiple active lecture series through the history program, faculty-led projects, faculty affiliates like Sabancı University's Digital Humanities Lab, and other schools at the School of Arts and Sciences brings students and scholars from different disciplines together to create a vibrant collaborative environment that extends well beyond the classroom.

The graduate program in Political Science at Sabancı University provides integrated training at MA and PhD levels. The program offers a comprehensive and up-to-date review of the major fields of Political Science and provides the students with a rigorous conceptual framework, basic analytical tools and sound methodological training in the discipline. The program covers the major fields of Political Science (Comparative Politics, International Relations, Political Theory) and offers a rich set of specialization possibilities. With a thematic concentration on Turkish Politics, European Politics and methodologies, the program stands out among its competitors in Turkey by its courses and faculty members specializing in formal theory and the production and analysis of quantitative evidence.

While some graduates of the MA program choose to pursue their careers in business, public administration or other professions, others enroll in PhD programs abroad or they move up to our integrated PhD program.

Sabancı University European Studies MA Program provides a comprehensive study of historical and contemporary developments in Europe, specifically of the European integration process, from a multi-disciplinary perspective. The students will acquire theoretical and practical knowledge of the European political and administrative systems as well as historical and philosophical foundations of modern Europe. They will also gain the necessary skills to compete for increasing opportunities in careers within the newly emerging institutions of Europe as Euro-bureaucrats and policy-makers, as representatives of and/or analysts/consultants to governments, NGOs and the private sector in all matters relating to the European Union.

Given Turkey's candidacy, there is a pressing need for advancing EU studies in Turkey and generating an awareness in the Turkish public opinion as well as the policy-making circles about the European Union, its decision-making procedures, its institutions. This is reflected in the increasing demand coming from the private sector to employ specialists who know how decisions are made within EU and how they might be effectively pursued and shaped.

RESEARCH AREAS

- Democracy in the EU
- European Foreign Policy
- European Integration
- European History
- Migration
- Political Economy of European Integration
- Turkey's Relations with EU

The Sabancı University Psychology M.S. Program brings together a vibrant group of researchers interested in understanding how people think, feel, and behave. Our graduate program has a strong emphasis on hands-on research experience. Our students gain extensive experience in communicating science, through writing scientific articles and presenting at seminars and conferences. We provide a solid methodological and statistical background, develop critical thinking, and provide experience and skills for every stage of the research process. Our students have the opportunity to use our state-of-the-art research facilities, including video-equipped observation laboratories, EEGs, online survey software, computer-based testing cubicles, eye trackers, large group testing spaces, facial electromyography equipment, and electrodermal activity equipment.

The Social Psychology Track focuses on interpersonal relationships and intergroup processes. Our students can gain experience using multiple methods including experiments, naturalistic and laboratory behavioral observations, cross-sectional and longitudinal surveys, and daily experience assessments. The Cognitive Psychology Track focuses on how we perceive, attend to, understand, remember, imagine and conceptualise our world, and how the brain supports these processes. Our students can gain expertise with cognitive neuroscience methods, psychophysiology, behavioral, observation and performance based measures, surveys, eye tracking and EEG.
